

THE DAILY CLARION.

JACKSON, MISS., FRIDAY MORNING, JULY 26, 1867.

NO. 2

THE DAILY CLARION.

LOST

the hills of memory treasured
With the jewels rich and rare,
The picture of an angel
Treading violet in her hair.
A fragrant life there,
Among the scents so rich and rare,
Change that pure of an angel
With the violet in her hair.

we walk'd the starry meadows
Where the violets lie with dew;
A dreamy vision in the distance
Lured us through the winding thicket;
A path so sweet and true
Left a faint drop of dew
As we went through the meadows—
Sweet and winding through.

begin the dreams, the meadows
Are decked with dew; the winding thicket
Is a dreamy vision in the distance;
A path so sweet and true
Left a faint drop of dew
As we went through the meadows—
Sweet and winding through.

Then comes the violet in her hair,
The picture of an angel
Treading violet in her hair.
A fragrant life there,
Among the scents so rich and rare,
Change that pure of an angel
With the violet in her hair.
